Dear Doctor Russell,

I was interested to hear that you have informed me of the plan to form an association of a company to hold certain patents on discoveries or inventions. I have been giving this matter some thought. The recent decision of the Supreme Court may be taken as a warning, not necessarily as a mandate, but it is clear that some form of control is necessary. The question of whether the use of public money in the discovery of a public service belongs to the public and is difficult for us to determine how they shall be used.

It seems to me that information discovered by the use of public money belongs to the public and it is difficult for us to determine how they shall be used.

Yours truly,
